

INSTRUCTIONS FOR TEACHERS:

- < Review student instructions.
- < Famil1vi3stud(uc)-s TIOitR10irtucududrG

children
cities
collecting

Five
how much Johannesburg
millions

one billion
pay
South Africa
supply
ten million

thirty twenty whom

- A. one billion people have to search for water
B. millions of women have to spend several hours each day collecting water
C. contaminated (dirty, polluted) water kills 6,000 people every day, mostly very young children.

Yes, there is (Yes, there is/No, there isn't) enough water for everyone.

The question is who should pay for water, how much they should pay, and whom they should pay.

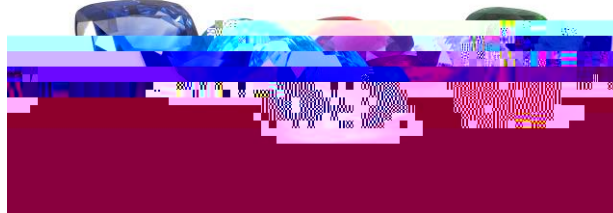

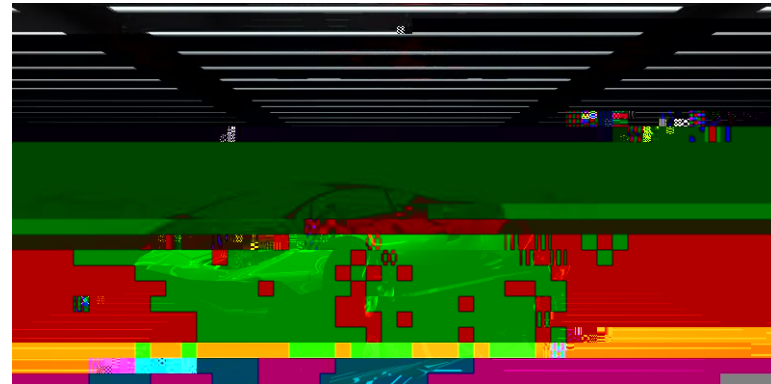

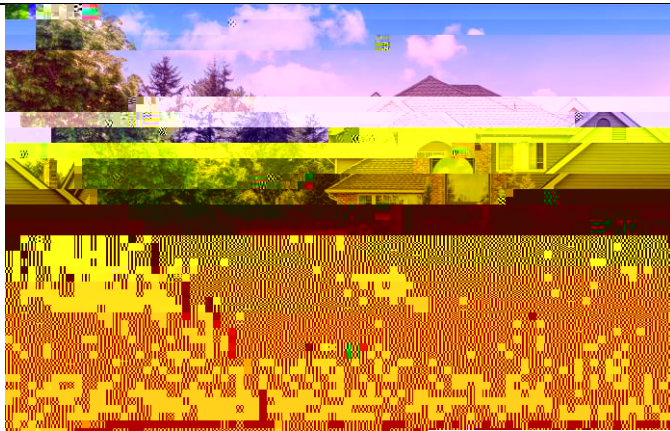

For the first time in history, the majority of people live in cities.

Five billion people will live in cities in about twenty years. There will also be _____

The narrator has a negative view about the future of water on Earth. He believes there are grotesque inequalities between how rich people and poor people have access to water. He believes there is enough water for everyone, but he doesn't know who should pay for water, how much people should pay, and whom they should pay. He believes the most difficult task will be to supply water to very large cities, and he believes this challenge will cause conflicts.

	example or demonstration	The water bar affords a particularly grotesque illustration of inequalities in our world.
inequality	not being equal or not having equal opportunities or status	The water bar affords a particularly grotesque illustration of inequalities in our world.
	most; more than half	For the first time in history, a majority of the world's population lives in cities.
	something you decide is the most important thing	For the author, the most important thing is the water bar.

- < Look at the pictures. These are all pictures of things that people want to show that they are rich or successful: a nice house, a fancy car, expensive jewels. These are all types of status symbols.
- < A status symbol is something you have or a way of living that shows you are rich or successful.
- < Partner talk: In the video today, the speaker calls fresh water a global status symbol. Think about the word "global." What is a global status symbol? Think about what you have learned about water. Why would fresh, clean water be a global status symbol?

